

White Leader in First Qualifying Round of 'Met' Golf Championship

Nassau Club Player Finishes With 73, Several Strokes Better Than Opponent.

BROOKLAWN COUNTRY CLUB.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 4.—Gardner White of the Nassau Club led the field in the first qualifying round of the Nineteenth Metropolitan Golf Championship on these links to-day.

White 73 was several strokes better than the closest opponent as all scores went high because a burning sun made the course about as chilly as a Turkish bath.

There were 68 starters in to-day's tournament which takes in the Metropolitan district fifty miles around New York City. While the intense heat was a serious handicap to nearly every one, White covered his 18 holes as if the sun wasn't on the job.

The leader played perfect golf until reaching the 15th where he twice drove into a good sized pond. There two mistakes gave him a 5 on a par 3 hole. The Nassau star quickly recovered, however, and on the 16th, where after hitting his tee shot into a shallow trap, he played a masher to within eight feet of the flag.

White's card:

Out—4 2 5 4 3 5 5 4—35

In—3 5 4 5 4 5 4 4 7 5—73

Oswald Kirkby of Englewood, the defending champion, had a tough time landing with the leaders. Kirkby had a weakness of getting in trouble, due chiefly to wild driving. On the 24-yard, third hole, the champion worked into traps three times which ran up to the count to six strokes. Kirkby again at the sixth found heaps of trouble. At the ninth his putting went wrong. In all, he was out in 48 strokes. The Englewood star improved coming in and clipped twelve strokes from his outward score, but an 84 total wasn't a very promising start for the 36-hole test.

Max Marston of Bauturol, a favorite for the "Met" title was unsteady at the outset of his round.

At the outset of his round, Marston's usually accurate driving frequently found the rough and his miscalculation was below standard. He did better returning and finished with a 78.

John G. Anderson, another favorite, was in good form and accounted for a 77.

Mrs. R. H. Barlow Wins Women's Eastern Golf Championship on Apawamis Links

Philadelphia Captures Honors in Two-Day Tourney With a Card of 177, Which Is Four Strokes Better Than That of Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck, Her Nearest Opponent.

By William Abbott.

A NOTHER victory for women.

While admiring males sought protection under shade trees and artificial cooling indoors nearly sixty women golfers played their final round for the Women's Eastern championship yesterday under a sun that made a gridiron of the Apawamis links. It was a display of pluck that the opposite sex discreetly sidestepped. It was all for the ladies while the mercury threatened to climb out of the thermometer. The women players not merely started on their rounds, they all finished, though their scores plainly showed what an unexpected obstacle the intense heat had been.

The winner of the two-day tournament was Mrs. R. H. Barlow of Philadelphia, who covered her round yesterday in 89 for a total of 177 strokes, which was four better than Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck, her nearest opponent.

Now, 89 over the difficult Apawamis course is no mean achievement for a man under favorable conditions. Yet Mrs. Barlow played her shots as if the baking sun was in hiding. Occasionally the winner fluffed into a yearning trap, but who doesn't do this in golf? These mistakes were coming rather frequently as the Philadelphia player neared home. A 7 on the seventeenth was considerable trouble, but Mrs. Barlow always had enough in reserve to land in the winning position. Her card:

Out—5 5 3 5 3 5 5 4 6—43

In—3 5 4 5 3 3 7 5—44—89

The Philadelphia District had a monopoly on leading positions. Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck who, like Mrs. Barlow, has figured prominently in women's tournaments for years, played sound golf all the way and came home in 91, one stroke higher than her first day's round.

The Metropolitan District earned third place when Mrs. W. A. Gavin, the little English champion, returned a 183 total. Mrs. Gavin had a 90 the first day, but the hot weather materially interfered with her putting and the Hudson River Club star took 93 on the final journey.

At fourth position another Philadelphia, Mrs. C. H. Stetson, edged in with a pair of 92s, which was consistently unusual for the links sport.

Mrs. L. C. Stockton of the Raritan Valley Club, over in Jersey, was going nicely until she reached the long, wicked eleventh hole. An inviting little brook criss-crosses the fairway and Mrs. Stockton just had to play into that brook twice. These mistakes temporarily unseated her club control and the penalty was 11 strokes for the hole. Despite this perfectly horrid business Mrs. Stockton negotiated the 18 holes in 96 for a 188 total.

Miss Marton Hollins, who upholds the feminine traditions of Long Island, actually improved over her first round with a 92, a difference of five strokes. This exhibition put Miss Hollins in sixth place.

The latest addition to local tournaments, Miss Glenna Collett, a sixteen-year-old star from New England, didn't land with the winners, but she displayed enough skill to warrant future consideration from Mrs. Barlow and all others who have championship aspirations. Miss Collett, without undue excitement, went out and helped herself to a pair of 92s, which wasn't so discouraging, considering it was her debut in a big tournament.

At the Grand Central Palace Base Hospital No. 5 last night the Boxers' Loyalty League entertained hundreds of wounded heroes in five different wards. Those that could get out in the open air were taken to the seashore and different breathing places by the Red Cross. Meanwhile the bed ridden wounded were given plenty of amusement in the form of boxing.

Regardless of the heat the boxers went on with their work under the direction of Dan Morgan, Harry Neary and Max Landow, who had a dozen sets of boxing gloves at hand and were kept on the jump, going from ward to ward, giving what proved to be one of the best shows staged in months.

The following mitt artists fought nine rounds each with plenty of knockdowns, including two knockouts. Arthur Brodie and Max Ring, Joe Dillon and Billy Van, Red Allen and Bob Sullivan, Silas Green and Jim Montgomery, Kurt Twine, Snake Kelly and Walter Brooks, K. O. Eggers and Tim Healy, Charlie Hayes and Phil Lundy, and Paul Richman and Arthur Brodie. The master of ceremonies was Peter Prunty with Patry Haley, Harry Stout and Bill Gates acting as referees.

Charges of Detective Not Substantiated by Verdict of Jury—Court Reversed Conviction.

A jury before Judge Rosalsky in General Sessions to-day acquitted Mrs. Carrie Niemand of No. 19 West 65th Street who was arrested Feb. 6 last by Detective Edward J. Donohue on a charge of disorderly conduct. Donohue alleged that Mrs. Niemand had accused men on the street.

City Magistrate March at the time of her arrest adjudged Mrs. Niemand guilty but gave her a suspended sentence. Her attorney, Nathan B. Chadsey, appealed and told Judge Rosalsky that Mrs. Niemand's arrest was the result of a conspiracy between Donohue and the woman's husband, William C. Niemand, a policeman attached to the West 45th Street station. The attorney charged that Niemand had been trying to discredit his wife who had obtained a decree of separation. Judge Rosalsky reversed the woman's conviction and ordered the facts laid before a jury. Mrs. Niemand denied the charge of the detective.
